Poetry.

My Irish Wife.

My Irish wife has clear blue eyes,
My heaven by day, my stars by night,
And twin-like truth and goodness lie
Within her smiling bosom white;
My Irish wife has golden hair—
Apollo's hair had once such strings—
Apollo's self might pause to hear
Her bird-like carol when she sings.

From the "Miles" (No.) Record, May 22.

A Young Man Shot and Instantly Killed by Another at a Rehearsal.

It is our painful lot, as a public journalist, to record one of the most shocking and terrible tragedies that has ever occurred in this country since we began the publication of this paper.

On last Tuesday evening, in the vicinity of Pennville, in the northeast part of this county a number of young ladies and gentlemen had assembled at the neighborhood school house for the purpose of rehearsing dramas, dialogues, declamations, &c., &c., preparatory for an exhibition to be given at that place.

It seems that several had already reached the school house, about 5 o'clock in the evening, while others of the society were still coming in. Mr. George Butler, a young man living in the neighborhood, took his gun—an Enfield rifle—and started to the school house, his father telling him he had no part in the exercises.

He went on, and just before arriving at the school house he came in company with a young lady—by two roads running into one. Upon seeing the young lady he playfully raised his gun and said, "Look out, I'll shoot you." She paid no attention to him, and passed on to the school house.

He followed up, and when in a short distance of the school house, he raised his gun and pointed it at a group of young folks standing in front of the school house, to frighten them, and then went up to where they were standing.

He then pointed his gun at several of those who were standing outside, all in fun, and then passed on into the school room. He went up to where the young lady, whom he had seen at the forks of the road, was sitting by the side of a young man by the name of Smart, and pointed the gun at her again.

Smart got up from his seat and pushed his gun to one side, and remarked that "such actions are not very agreeable," then stepped back to take his seat by the side of the young lady. Just as he was in the act of sitting down, young Butler swung the gun around, and by some means it was discharged, the ball entering just below the left nostril of Frank Smart's face; and just as he was falling he exclaimed, "Oh, George!" and "Oh," calling the young lady by name, and fell at her feet and expired instantly.

All was excitement and confusion in the room at the horrible tragedy that had just been enacted. Young Butler threw his gun into a corner of the schoolroom, and walked to the door and fled into the woods. Up to the present writing (Wednesday) he has not been seen or heard of since.

It is generally believed that the gun was accidentally discharged, and that young Butler was not guilty of shooting Smart intentionally. Mr. Frank Smart was an intelligent and moral young man, and was highly esteemed and respected by all who knew him.

His untimely death has cast a deep gloom over the neighborhood in which he lived, and many friends are mourning for the beloved young man. We learn the above particulars from a gentleman who came to town this morning from that neighborhood.

A REBEL ANECDOTE.—In the work of John Estlin Cooke, entitled "Wearing of the Gray," the following anecdote occurs, which may, perhaps, be appreciated under the present circumstances:

In 1863 the enemy caught an old countryman, near Madison Court House, and informed him that he must do one thing—either take the oath of allegiance to the United States government or prepare to be buried alive. He declined taking the oath, when his captors liberally proceeded in his presence to dig a grave, and when it was finished they led him to it and said:—

"Will you take the oath?"
"No!" responded the prisoner.
"You had better!"
"I won't!"

"If you don't take the oath you will be buried alive in the next five minutes!"

The old fellow approached nearer, looked with attention at the pit yawning before him, and then turning round, with his hands in his pockets, calmly replied:—

"Well, go on with your funeral!"

A New Jersey correspondent of the American Agriculturist knows of no plant raised as food for cattle that gives as much net profit as the Jerusalem artichoke, and thinks that every one that has cattle to feed ought to have at least one acre planted with them. The tubers are perfectly hardy, and may be left in the ground all winter without injury; in fact they are like the parsnip, being improved in quality by being frozen. Early in spring, when green food is usually scarce, the tubers may be dug, and fed to cattle with a decided benefit.

GREAT IMPROVEMENT IN DENTISTRY.

The attention of the public is called to a great discovery in Dentistry.

THE GREATEST ADVANCE STEP EVER MADE IN THE ART.

The main difficulty in wearing artificial teeth is, they do not hold in their place firmly enough, and add to the annoyance of food getting under the plate while eating. I have discovered a method of so constructing the plate of which the teeth are set that they will not start or drop while eating or speaking, neither will any particles of food get under the plate, no matter what the condition of the mouth is, which is not true of any method hitherto used.

I have secured Letters Patent for the United States, England and France.

The improvement is not in material, but in the construction, which secures the atmospheric pressure on the entire plate.

I have sold the exclusive of said improvement to Dr. L. Gilman, of the Countess of Franklin, Washington, Chittenden, Lamoille and Grand Isle. Those wishing to avail themselves of such improvement, will call on
